- Replicating what is working, for the process of dreaming and planning, and for immediate plug-in to developing projects.

Neighborhood participation in Flint's future through the implementation of the Master Plan is a difficult task. Flint's long-term sustainability needs its residents to participate in the maintenance and development of their neighborhoods. Equitable development will need a long term ownership of changes and the skills to maintain and grow changed communities and will require practical participation neighborhood by neighborhood.

Neighborhood organizations across Flint are engaged in improving their community and quality of life through public safety, blight elimination, public space maintenance, beautification, vacant space alternative uses, commercial and residential development. Rebuilding and maintaining a community is hard work. It is work that members of a community have to do to have a comfortable and desirable neighborhood. Civic engagement is integral to assuring that grassroots community groups are able to be fully engaged in our city and essential to the on-going implementation of the Master Plan. Neighborhood Engagement Hub empowers communities to shape and grow their future.
